

THE STATE BAR OF CALIFORNIA
STANDING COMMITTEE ON PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY AND CONDUCT
FORMAL OPINION INTERIM NO. 14-0004

ISSUE: Issue #1: What are the attorney’s duties when the attorney suspects, but does not know, a client’s witness who is expected to testify at a civil trial has testified falsely, albeit favorably, for the attorney’s client.

Issue #2: What are the attorney’s duties when the attorney knows, rather than merely suspects, the same witness has committed perjury and yet the client instructs the attorney to use the witness’s known false testimony at the upcoming civil trial?

Issue #3: The facts are the same as Issue #2, except the attorney first learns of the perjury after the witness has testified at trial. Thus, what are the attorney’s duties, if any, after gaining knowledge of the witness’s perjury at trial, the client nonetheless has instructed the attorney to continue to use the perjured testimony in the remainder of the trial?

DIGEST: Because an attorney must vigorously represent a client, the attorney may offer testimony of questionable credibility; however, because of the duty of candor to the court, an attorney must not present or use perjured testimony known by the attorney to be false even if the client has instructed the attorney to do so. If testimony known to be materially false has already been offered, the attorney must take reasonable remedial measures to correct the record without violating the duty of confidentiality. If such measures fail, the attorney may have a duty to seek to withdraw from the representation.

AUTHORITIES INTERPRETED:

Rules 1.6, 1.16, and 3.3 of the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California.^{1/}

Business and Professions Code sections 6068, 6106, and 6128.

^{1/} Rules of Professional Conduct citations in this opinion are to the rules that became effective November 1, 2018. Each cited rule existed, prior to November 1, 2018, in similar or somewhat similar form, as follows: rule 1.6 previously as rule 3-100; rule 1.16 as rule 3-700; and rule 3.3 as rule 5-200. Unless otherwise indicated, all references to “rules” in this opinion will be to the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Attorney (“Attorney”) represents plaintiff (“Client”) in a sexual harassment case against her immediate supervisor (“Supervisor”) and her employer. Before the lawsuit is filed, Attorney interviews Client’s co-worker (“Witness”), who corroborates, as an eyewitness, evidence of Supervisor’s sexual harassment directly supporting Client’s key claims. The eyewitness testimony is crucial; without it, Client may well lose the case.

Attorney files the lawsuit and during discovery discloses Witness as a percipient witness supporting Client’s allegations. The defense deposes Witness, who testifies, under oath, consistent with the statements he earlier made to Attorney. When the case is set for trial, Attorney lists Witness as a trial witness.

Scenario #1: Shortly before trial, Attorney reviews Witness’s deposition testimony, and, based on newly obtained and seemingly credible testimony from other sources, begins to have doubts about the truthfulness of Witness’s eyewitness testimony. Attorney forms the opinion, but does not know with certainty, that Witness may have lied about being an eyewitness and may have come forward only as a favor to help Client as a fellow employee and friend.

Scenario #2: Shortly before trial, Client tells Attorney that Witness recently admitted to fabricating his claim to having been an eyewitness to the sexual harassment. Attorney promptly contacts Witness, who admits to having given the false deposition testimony. Attorney informs Client, who nonetheless instructs Attorney to use Witness’s false testimony at trial.

Scenario #3: Unlike Scenario #1 or #2, Attorney does not know before trial that Witness’s deposition testimony was perjured. At trial, during opening statements, Attorney refers to the importance of Witness’s eyewitness testimony. Witness testifies on Client’s behalf, claiming to be an eyewitness to the sexual harassment. Attorney cross-examines Supervisor, seeking to impeach him with Witness’s eyewitness account. Before trial concludes, however, Client tells Attorney that Witness has admitted to lying in his trial testimony. Attorney promptly contacts Witness, who admits that his testimony claiming to be an eyewitness to the harassment was willfully false. Client instructs Attorney not to reveal the perjury to the court and insists that Attorney continue to use the perjured testimony in the remainder of the trial.

DISCUSSION

These scenarios address progressing situations in which an attorney must balance advocacy with the duties of candor to the court and client confidentiality.

Scenario #1

This scenario poses the question regarding what an attorney is ethically obligated to do if the attorney comes to suspect, but does not know, the client’s witness may have testified falsely on a material matter at deposition. The deposition testimony has not yet been presented to the court.

In evaluating their duties in this context, attorneys must keep in mind their duty to vigorously represent their clients within the bounds of the law. In so doing they are entitled to resolve all doubts about the credibility of evidence in their client's favor. People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal.3d 616, 631 [194 Cal.Rptr. 462]; People v. Crawford (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 874 [66 Cal.Rptr. 527] ("attorney should represent his client to the hilt"); McCoy v. Court of Appeals of Wisconsin (1988) 486 U.S. 429, 444 [108 S.Ct. 1895] ("In searching for the strongest arguments available, the attorney must be zealous and must resolve all doubts and ambiguous legal questions in favor of his or her client.").^{2/}

In this scenario Attorney lacks actual knowledge that the testimony was untruthful. Rather, Attorney is merely skeptical about Witness's veracity. A mere suspicion that the testimony could be false will not preclude Attorney from using it. "Although attorneys may not present evidence they know to be false or assist in perpetrating known frauds on the court, they may ethically present evidence that they suspect, but do not personally know, is false Presenting incredible evidence may raise difficult tactical decisions – if counsel finds evidence incredible, the fact finder may also – but, as long as counsel has no specific undisclosed factual knowledge of its falsity, it does not raise an ethical problem." (People v. Bolton (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 343, 357 [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 671], citing People v. Riel (2000) 22 Cal.4th 1153, 1217 [96 Cal.Rptr.2d 1]).^{3/} See also, rule 3.3(a)(3) ("A lawyer shall not: . . . offer evidence the lawyer knows to be false.").^{4/}

Thus, Attorney's mere skepticism over the Witness's truthfulness, standing alone, does not ethically preclude the use of the testimony. Attorney may present this evidence and, consistent with the duty of vigorous advocacy, forcefully argue Client's cause based on it. However, under rule 3.3(a)(3) "a lawyer may refuse to offer evidence . . . the lawyer reasonably believes is false" in a civil case. (Emphasis added).

^{2/} See also, Cassim v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 33 Cal.4th 780, 795 [16 Cal.Rptr.3d 374] (as modified Oct. 13, 2004) (counsel has "very wide" latitude to discuss the merits of a case, both as to law and facts); Nishihama v. City & Cty. of San Francisco (2001) 93 Cal.App.4th 298, 305 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 861] (Counsel "is entitled to argue his or her case vigorously and to argue all reasonable inferences from the evidence"); Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 Cal.App.2d 608, 659 [277 P.2d 897] ("Counsel in summing up a case are given wide latitude and may indulge in all fair arguments in favor of their client's case.").

^{3/} See also, Nguyen v. Knowles (E.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2010) 2010 WL 3057678 *12 ("Precedent in this and other circuits suggests that an attorney should have a "firm factual basis" for believing that a client will testify falsely before acting on such a belief"); Orange County Bar Association Formal Opn. No. 2003-01 ("actual knowledge" standard should apply in criminal cases).

^{4/} Rule 1.0.1(f) defines "knows" as "actual knowledge of the fact in question" and adds: "A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances." Because witnesses rarely admit to having committed perjury, it can be difficult to determine whether perjury has occurred. The "materiality" element of the crime of perjury "may not become apparent until the close of all testimony It is not a simple matter for an attorney to conclude . . . that he/she knows [the witness] has committed perjury." Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 1983-74.

Scenario #2

In this scenario, Attorney's state of mind as to Witness's veracity has advanced from skepticism to actual knowledge of falsity. The testimony is perjured, it is willfully false and material, because, as stated above, "The eyewitness testimony is crucial; without it, Client may well lose the case."^{5/} Nonetheless, Client, has instructed Attorney to use the perjured testimony at trial.

This scenario concerns an attorney's duty of candor to the court, found in rule 3.3 ("Candor Toward the Tribunal") and Business and Professions Code section 6068. The former provides in part, "A lawyer shall not: . . . offer evidence the lawyer knows to be false." Likewise, Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and (d) provide, "It is the duty of an attorney . . . : (b) To maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers. . . . [and] (d) To employ . . . means only as are consistent with truth, and never to seek to mislead the judge or any judicial officer by an artifice or false statement of fact or law."

Because Attorney knows the testimony is false, rule 3.3 and section 6068 would bar its presentation as would Business and Professions Code section 6106, which proscribes "the commission of any act involving, moral turpitude, dishonesty or corruption." In addition, Business and Professions Code section 6128 provides: "Every attorney is guilty of a misdemeanor who either: (a) Is guilty of any deceit or collusion, or consents to any deceit or collusion, with intent to deceive the court or any party." It is well established in case law as well that "[a]n attorney who attempts to benefit his client through the use of perjured testimony may be subject to criminal prosecution . . . as well as severe disciplinary action." In re Branch (1969) 70 Cal.2d 200, 211 [74 Cal.Rptr. 238].

Therefore, Attorney's ethical mandate is clear. Attorney, knowing of the perjury, may not solicit or otherwise seek to introduce the testimony in question.

In this civil case setting, Attorney also has the authority to refuse to follow Client's instruction to submit the perjured testimony.^{6/} The Supreme Court addressed the question of an

^{5/} Perjury is defined as testimony under oath which is "willfully" false on a "material" matter. California Penal Code section 118. "Materiality" means a false statement that "could probably influence the outcome of the proceeding." People v. Rubio (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 927, 933 [17 Cal.Rptr.3d 524].

^{6/} In contrast the defendant-client's sixth amendment right to testify in their own defense in a criminal proceeding reserves to the client, not the attorney, ultimate control over whether to personally testify. Rock v. Arkansas (1987) 483 U.S. 44, 49-52 [107 S.Ct. 2704]. Thus, the "criminal defendant has the right to take the stand even over the objections of his trial counsel." People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608, 618 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805]. In that setting, the attorney's options, even if the attorney is aware the client intends to commit perjury, include allowing the testimony to go forward in a narrative format. (Id. at p. 629-630.) See also, rule 3.3, Comment [4] (In criminal trials a defense lawyer may offer the defendant's testimony "in a narrative form if the lawyer made reasonable efforts to dissuade the client from the unlawful course of conduct and the lawyer has sought permission from the court to withdraw as required by rule 1.16. The obligations of a lawyer under these rules and the State Bar Act are attorney's authority to refuse to call a particular witness in Blanton v. Womancare (1985) 38 Cal.3d 396 [212 Cal.Rptr. 151]: "Considerations of procedural efficiency require . . . that in the course of a trial there be but one captain per ship. An attorney must be able to make such tactical decisions whether to call a particular witness, and the court and opposing counsel must be able to rely upon the decisions he makes, even when the client voices opposition in open court." (Id. at p. 404 [citations omitted]).^{7/} Thus, an attorney may refuse to call a witness even though the client requests that the witness testify. Nahhas v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1961) 192 Cal.App.2d 145, 146 [13 Cal.Rptr. 299].^{8/}

Here, Attorney must refuse to follow Client's instruction to offer the false testimony at the upcoming trial. Attorney must remonstrate with Client, explaining to her the illegality of perjury, the potential consequences to her sponsoring perjured testimony^{9/} and Attorney's ethical duty to refuse to be party to any such offering. Rule 3.3, Comment [4] ("If a lawyer knows the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered and, if unsuccessful, must refuse to offer the false evidence.").

If, despite remonstrations, Client persists with the instruction, Attorney must again refuse to carry out the instruction. Attorney may continue in the representation but, consistent with Attorney's authority to control witness presentation in civil cases, may not offer Witness's testimony at the upcoming trial.

subordinate to applicable constitutional provisions.") (citations omitted). Use of the narrative approach in a criminal trial has been accepted where a third-party witness is committing perjury. See, People v. Gadson (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 1700, 1712 [24 Cal.Rptr.2d 219].

^{7/} "[I]n both civil and criminal matters, a party's attorney has general authority to control the procedural aspects of the litigation and, indeed, to bind the client in these matters." In re Horton (1991) 54 Cal.3d 82, 94, 102 [284 Cal.Rptr. 305]. Encompassed in this is the authority to control matters of ordinary trial strategy, such as which witnesses to call, the manner of cross-examination, what evidence to introduce, and whether to object to an opponent's evidence. Gdowski v. Gdowski (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 128, 138 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 799]. However, a decision on any matter that will affect the client's substantive rights is within the client's sole authority. Maddox v. City of Costa Mesa (2011) 193 Cal.App.4th 1098, 1105 [122 Cal.Rptr.3d 629].

^{8/} In addition, if Witness's only purpose at trial would be to testify as an alleged eyewitness on matters now known to be false, Witness should not be mentioned in pretrial disclosure documents; for example, pretrial witness lists or trial briefs.

^{9/} Penal Code section 127: "Every person who willfully procures another person to commit perjury is guilty of subornation of perjury, and is punishable in the same manner as he would be if personally guilty of the perjury so procured."

Another option for Attorney, rather than continuing to trial, is to request that Client allow Attorney to withdraw as counsel under the rule of “permissive withdrawal” in rule 1.16(b).^{10/} Attorney should also consider whether the disagreement with Client has caused a deterioration in their relationship so significant that Attorney “can no longer competently and diligently represent the client” in which case Attorney may have a mandatory duty to seek to withdraw. Rule 3.3, Comment [8]. If Client refuses, then Attorney may move the court to withdraw as counsel without disclosing the perjured testimony. People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1335, 1339-1340, fn. 1 [250 Cal.Rptr. 762]. See also, Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 2015-192 (attorneys may disclose to the court only as much as reasonably necessary to demonstrate the need to withdraw and without violating the duty of confidentiality).^{11/} However, Attorney may only withdraw after taking reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to Client’s rights. Rule 1.16(d).

Scenario #3

In this scenario, Attorney first learns of the perjury after Witness has testified at trial. Witness has been presented to the trier of fact as possessing crucial information. Client, nonetheless, has instructed Attorney not to take any corrective action and insists that Attorney continue to use the perjured testimony through the remainder of the trial, including closing argument. Attorney’s duty of candor to the court is immediately implicated.

Attorney’s statutory duties of candor are found in Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and (d), 6106, and 6128(a) discussed in Scenario #2. Attorney’s ethical duty of candor after learning that previously presented evidence is false is found in rule 3.3(a)(3), which states that “If . . . a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence, and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal, unless disclosure is prohibited by Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e) and rule 1.6.” Because the witness’s testimony is material and known to be false, the duty to take such measures has arisen.

^{10/} Rule 1.16(b) presents several circumstances allowing for permissive withdrawal that may be implicated under these facts: the client seeks to pursue a course of conduct the lawyer reasonably believes was a crime or fraud, the client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is criminal or fraudulent, or the client’s conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to carry out the representation effectively or the representation is likely to result in a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act. Rule 1.16(b)(2)-(4) and (b)(9).

^{11/} Additional facts, not explicitly present under this scenario, may impose a mandatory duty upon Attorney to withdraw from the employment. Rule 1.16(a)(1) & (2) (attorney “shall” withdraw if he knows or reasonably should know the client is presenting a claim or defense without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person or attorney knows or reasonably should know the representation will result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act).

The problem here is the collision between the duty of candor and the duty of confidentiality. This is because Attorney's knowledge of Witness's perjury constitutes a "client secret."

"'Client secrets' covers a broader category of information than do confidential attorney-client communications; confidential communications are merely a subset of what are considered client secrets. Indeed, 'client secrets' include not only confidential attorney-client communications, but also information about the client that may not have been obtained through a confidential communication." Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 2016-195, p. 2-3. Thus, "'Client secrets means any information obtained by the lawyer during the professional relationship, or relating to the representation, which the client has requested to be inviolate or the disclosure of which might be embarrassing or detrimental to the client.'" Id. at p. 2. Further, rule 1.6(a) states, "A lawyer shall not reveal information protected from disclosure by Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(1) unless the client gives informed consent. . . ." And Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(1) provides that attorneys must "maintain inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself or herself to preserve the secrets, of his or her client." This prohibition is reinforced by rule 1.8.2 which provides: "A lawyer shall not use a client's information . . . protected by section 6068, subdivision (e)(1) to the disadvantage of the client unless the client gives informed consent, except as permitted by these rules or the State Bar Act."

Here, all elements of a "client secret" are present. Revelation of the fact – a key witness proffered by Client has committed perjury on a crucial issue – is likely to be embarrassing and detrimental to Client. Attorney acquired knowledge of the perjury from Client, and confirmed by Witness, all of which occurred within the course of the representation. Further, Client has instructed Attorney not to take corrective action. Rules 1.6 and 1.8.2, therefore, prohibit Attorney from disclosing that the Witness's testimony was false.^{12/}

The Rules of Professional Conduct encourage the attorney, where there are perjury concerns, to remonstrate with the client, first and foremost, rather than seeking to withdraw. See rule 3.3 in its entirety, including Comments. The policy underpinnings for the "remonstration first" preference must stem from the recognition that withdrawing from the representation may not cure the problem that the perjury may remain in the case.^{13/}

^{12/} If the ABA rules were applicable, Attorney might have the option of withdrawing or correcting the testimony over the client's objection. Under the ABA rules, the duty of candor trumps the duty of client confidentiality. See, ABA Rule 3.3(a)(3) (if lawyer has knowledge of client or client-witness perjury, the duty to take remedial measures includes, "if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal.") As discussed above, however, in California, the duty of candor does not override the duty of confidentiality.

^{13/} See People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608, 623 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805] ("[W]e note that permitting defense counsel to withdraw does not necessarily resolve the problem. That approach could trigger an endless cycle of defense continuances and motions to withdraw as the accused informs each new attorney of the intent to testify falsely. Or the accused may be less candid with his new attorney by keeping his perjurious intent to himself, thereby facilitating the presentation of false testimony. Lastly,

Thus, in this scenario, Attorney must employ “reasonable remedial measures” available under the Rules of Professional Conduct and the State Bar Act “which a reasonable attorney would consider appropriate under the circumstances to comply with the lawyer’s duty of candor to the tribunal.” Rule 3.3, Comment [5]. Such remonstrations measures “include explaining to the client the lawyer’s obligations under this rule and, where applicable, the reasons for the lawyer’s decision to seek permission from the tribunal to withdraw, and remonstrating further with the client to take corrective action that would eliminate the need for the lawyer to withdraw.” Id. Corrective action would include striking or correcting Witness’s false testimony by stipulation or motion. Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 1983-74. Or, Client could testify to Witness’s admission.

Here, however, Attorney’s attempts at remonstrating with Client have failed. Client will not authorize Attorney to move to strike the testimony. Further, Client instructs Attorney to continue to use the perjured testimony.

Attorney may analyze whether it would be appropriate to strike the testimony over Client’s objection under the theory, as discussed in Scenario #2, that Attorney, as “captain of the ship,” has the ultimate control over evidentiary decisions in civil cases. This course may be perilous because it is questionable whether the metaphorical “ship’s captain” has the authority, even in a civil case, to take action, against the client’s instructions, that would sink the ship. Such would be the concern here because, as the hypothetical states, “the eyewitness testimony is crucial; without it, Client may well lose the case.”^{14/} In addition, depending on the circumstances, a motion to strike the testimony could effectively result in the disclosure of information protected by the duty of confidentiality.

Because remonstrations has failed, Attorney must consider as well whether it is appropriate, or even required, to seek to withdraw as counsel. Under rule 1.16(b), which authorizes permissive withdrawal, Attorney has valid grounds to seek to withdraw. See discussion of this rule’s pertinent subsections in footnote 10, supra.

there is the unfortunate possibility that the accused may find an unethical attorney who would knowingly present and argue the false testimony. Thus, defense counsel’s withdrawal from the case would not really solve the problem created by the anticipated perjury but, in fact, could create even more problems.”).

^{14/} Blanton v. Womancare, Inc., supra, 38 Cal.3d at 404-405 (“An attorney is not authorized, however, merely by virtue of his retention in litigation, to ‘impair the client’s substantial rights or the cause of action itself.’ . . . [A]n attorney may not stipulate to a matter which would eliminate an essential defense. . . . Such decisions differ from the routine and tactical decisions which have been called ‘procedural’ both in the degree to which they affect the client’s interest, and in the degree to which they involve matters of judgment which extend beyond technical competence so that any client would be expected to share in the making of them.”) (internal citations omitted).

However, whether seeking to withdraw has become mandatory under rule 1.16(a) requires a deeper analysis. Rule 3.3, Comment [8] provides: “A lawyer’s compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation.” However, the Comment goes on to state, “The lawyer, may, however, be required by rule 1.16 to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer’s compliance with this rule results in a deterioration of the lawyer-client relationship such that the lawyer can no longer competently and diligently represent the client, or where continued employment will result in a violation of these rules.”

The facts in this scenario strongly suggest a deteriorating lawyer-client relationship. This is not a disagreement over a minor strategy decision. Client disagrees with Attorney’s remonstrations to her on matters fundamental to our judicial system and Attorney’s ethical duties. Client insists on proceeding despite knowing her case relies on perjured testimony which will not be corrected. Client instructs Attorney to continue to use the false testimony.

But Comment [8] to rule 3.3 does not make withdrawal mandatory merely because of a deteriorating client relationship. Standing alone a substantial disagreement with a client does not require an attorney to seek to withdraw. Rule 1.16(b) (withdrawal is permissive when client “renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to carry out the representation effectively”). Instead, Comment [8] mandates that the deterioration also must adversely affect Attorney’s ability to competently and diligently represent the Client or will cause the continued employment to violate the Rules.

Here, Attorney still has the option to take remedial action by refusing to refer to or rely upon the perjured testimony in all remaining aspects of the trial. As discussed in Scenario #2 above, Attorney can and must do so even despite Client’s instructions to the contrary. Under these facts, Attorney following the “never mention or use it again” approach may continue to competently and diligently represent Client.^{15/}

Never referring to or relying upon the testimony again, however, will be insufficient according to Comment [8] if the continued employment will cause Attorney to violate the Rules. Note well, the use of “will,” which derives from the mandatory withdrawal provision of rule 1.16(a): “the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in a violation of these rules or of the State Bar Act.”^{1/} On the other hand, under rule 1.16(b)(9) withdrawal is ^{15/} Additional facts might cause Attorney to be concerned whether the duties of competent and diligent representation may still be satisfied. Does Client’s intransigence, including Client’s clearly improper instruction to use the perjured testimony, signal the end of further cooperation on other significant issues that might arise during the trial such that Attorney’s ability to control the representation will suffer? Is the breakdown so severe Attorney will lose the necessary motivation to appropriately represent Client’s lawful interests?

permissive if continuation of the representation is only “likely” to result in a violation of the rules or State Bar Act.

The difference between what “will” cause a rule violation (mandatory withdrawal) versus what is “likely” to cause a rule violation (discretionary withdrawal) is not always clear. In seeking to trace this line, Attorney must consider whether Attorney’s continued involvement in the case could be construed to be Attorney’s consent to or endorsement of the perjury. Here, although Attorney used the perjured testimony in opening statement and examination and cross-examination of witnesses, Attorney did so without knowledge of the falsity and going forward will make no further reference to it. Attorney will not be explicitly endorsing or consenting to the perjury in the remaining aspects of the trial.

On the other hand, the perjured testimony is, as stated above, “crucial,” and Client likely will lose the trial without it. Attorney should evaluate whether the perjury will continue to materially influence the outcome and benefit Client, despite that Attorney will make no further explicit use of it. The central question for Attorney is whether the representation of Client may continue through the rest of the trial without putting Attorney in the position of having impliedly endorsed or consented to the perjury.

In this regard, Attorney should examine several questions, such as: Is Attorney able to effectively argue and present other aspects of the case which are untainted by the perjury? For example, did Witness provide other testimony not known to be perjured which is a benefit to Client? How can Attorney vouch for any aspect of Witness’s testimony knowing of the perjury? Did other witnesses, including experts, rely upon the perjured testimony in some way and refer to it favorably? To effectively represent Client must Attorney continue to vouch for those witnesses in some way? Is the perjured testimony embedded in exhibits which have been admitted into evidence? Did the court make, or will it make, rulings (for example, on motions in limine, to dismiss or for nonsuit) relying upon the perjured testimony which may affect the outcome?

The analysis of these and other factors may lead Attorney to conclude that, remaining on the case, without mentioning or relying upon the perjured testimony again, nonetheless will constitute implied consent to or endorsement of the perjury and “will” cause a rule violation. See again the citations to rule 3.3, Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and (d), 6106, and 6128(a), and In re Branch discussed under Scenario #1 above.^{16/} If an attorney of ^{16/} See also Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 1983-74 (“Attorney may not remain silent and is required to take action to ensure that he/she does not give his/her implicit consent to the deception. Silence and inaction would not be consistent with truth and would constitute, albeit indirectly, an attempt to mislead the judge by an artifice, to wit, the client’s false testimony of a material fact.”).

reasonable prudence and competence would reach such a conclusion, then Attorney's mandatory duty to seek to withdraw from the representation will have been triggered.^{17/}

If the decision is to withdraw, Attorney should forewarn Client that withdrawal may negatively impact Client's credibility. In seeking to withdraw, Attorney cannot disclose the specific reasons due to the duty of confidentiality still owed to Client (Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 2015-192; rule 1.16, Cmt. [4]) and shall not withdraw from employment until he has "taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice." Id. at 1.16(d).

If a withdrawal motion is unsuccessful then Attorney must not refer to or rely upon the perjured testimony throughout the rest of the case. See Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 1983-74 ("[T]he attorney may not thereafter rely upon or refer to any of the perjured testimony. To do so would constitute a willful misrepresentation by the attorney of matters that he/she knows to be untrue, which could subject the attorney to discipline. The attorney must conduct the balance of the trial as if such testimony had been stricken from the record.") (Citations omitted).^{18/}

CONCLUSION

An attorney should be an assertive advocate and may ethically argue that evidence with questionable credibility should be considered. Yet, an attorney may not use, and must refuse to submit, evidence known to be false. When the attorney has actual knowledge during a trial that a witness has committed perjury, the duty of candor to the tribunal requires the attorney to take reasonable remedial measures consistent with the duty of confidentiality. Those measures include remonstrating with the client to take corrective action. If the client refuses, the attorney may be required to seek to withdraw from the representation.

^{17/} Under rule 1.16(a)(1) and (2) the duty to withdraw is mandatory where the lawyer "knows or reasonably should know" of the required facts. To "know" means actual knowledge of the fact in question although knowledge may be inferred from circumstances. "Reasonably should know" means that "a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would ascertain the matter in question." Rule 1.01(f) and (j).

^{18/} An attorney violates the duty of candor, even where the fabrications are the work of another, if the attorney, after learning of their falsity, continues to assert their authenticity. In the Matter of Temkin (Review Dept. 1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 321; Olguin v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal.3d 195, 198-200 [167 Cal.Rptr. 876].
